LIFE WITHOUT NOTICE
OZAÉ
Dark modern trip-hop with stronger punch, Tight, crisp drums with a sharp snare and deep driving kick, Add more rhythmic energy and percussive details, Bass should be heavy, warm, and forward in the mix, creating tension, Keep atmospheric jazz accents extremely minimal and distant, Mood: cinematic, urban, gritty, hypnotic, tense, The groove must feel urgent but controlled, Vocals: low, spoken-sung, rhythmic, confident, with clear presence and emotional pressure, No softness, Voice close to the mic, modern and raw, Avoid retro sounds, avoid lo-fi textures, avoid traditional jazz instruments in front, Keep everything modern, sharp, minimal, and edgy

Verse 1]
Life doesn't give you notice.
It steals a handful of days,
gives one back,
and somehow that has to be enough.
We learn to walk
with the wounds still open,
with breath that never feels long enough,
carrying dreams

They say love is oxygen,
but look at us:
still breathing,
still waking up,
still dragging our hearts like old suitcases with nothing fragile inside.

Cover of DESERT TRUTH

In the body,
In the blood,
We forget this simple truth:
Every fracture,
Every flood Still belongs

Verse 1]
Life doesn't warn you.
It cuts.
It takes.
It leaves you a scrap
and calls it a gift.
We walk anyway.
Wounds open.
Breath short.
Dreams too heavy.
But we move.

I sort things out —
between glass and my verses,
despotic relations,
plastic and far from organic.
I wonder if love is recyclable,
or if it's built to last.
With all those throwaway words,
and biodegradable promises.
We sort our waste, but not our thoughts,

INTRO
I asked an AI... ah
"Who am I?"
She said:
"You're the one asking."
A glitch.
A question in motion.
VERSE 1
She scanned my silence, checked my likes.
Said, "You breathe... but you won't make strikes."
Offered me a filter for my emotions.

[Verse 1]
I'm getting my life straight.
Same days, same loop — I'm late.
Took a coach to clear my head.
She said "everything you need is already there."
Cool.
But I'm still trying to get somewhere.
